Dr. Sandra F. Witelson

Albert Einstein/Irving Zucker Chair in Neuroscience & Professor, Psychiatry & Behavioural Neurosciences, McMaster University

Imagine having an opportunity to study the brain of one of the millennium's greatest minds.

The McMaster-Einstein connection started in 1995 with an unexpected invitation to Dr. Sandra Witelson to examine the preserved brain of Professor Albert Einstein, 40 years after his death at Princeton. This invitation recognized that Dr. Witelson had developed an extensive brain bank which could be used for comparisons. Unique differences were found in Einstein's brain and the findings were published and reported in the media around the world.

Dr. Witelson grew up in Montreal and obtained her PhD in Neuropsychology from McGill University. She joined McMaster University's Department of Psychiatry very early in the development of the new medical school in 1969, was promoted to the rank of full professor in 1977 and to associate appointments in the Departments of Psychology and Biomedical Sciences. Dr. Witelson is currently professor in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioural Neurosciences, and a member of the professional staff of the Hamilton Health Sciences Corporation. She is also a member of the Dana Alliance for Brain Initiatives, NYC. In 1999, she became the inaugural holder of the Albert Einstein / Irving Zucker Chair in Neuroscience.

Join Dr. Witelson to hear first-hand about her research with Einstein's brain, what she and her colleagues found, what further studies she is pursuing, and what scientific and medical issues are raised by this work.
