Mediated Histories: How Victorian Periodicals Parsed the Past

A talk by

Leslie Howsam
University of Windsor

Leslie Howsam is Professor Emerita in History at Windsor and Senior Research Fellow, Centre for Digital Humanities, Ryerson University.

Friday, February 19, 4:30-6:00pm

AQ 6106

Simon Fraser University

When we think of “History” in the 19th century, many people think either of the newly professional academic discipline or of the authoritative book-length studies they produced. This lecture starts instead from the perspective of the magazines, newspapers and reviews that constituted the media experience of Victorian readers – and finds that these material genres were rich with accounts and reviews of historical knowledge.