Katja Lee is a SSHRC postdoctoral fellow at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia, and a member of the Persona, Celebrity, Publics Research Group at Deakin University in Melbourne, Australia, and teacher at University of Western Australia. She has published essays on celebrity, public identity performance, and life writing. Her most recent work has been published in Celebrity Studies, The Journal of Popular Culture, and Studies in Canadian Literature. Her present research traces how Canadian magazines fostered an emerging contemporary celebrity culture in Canada in the 1910-1930 period.