Course Description:
This course will examine some historical and contemporary instances of feminist consciousness and feminist resistance in Western and Global contexts. Topics that will be covered include definitions of feminisms, theories of the origins of patriarchy, women's place and feminine resistance in major religions, women's struggle for formal education, the quest for equal rights, suffrage movements, and the intersection of gender with other oppressions. The emphasis throughout the course will be on developing conceptions of feminisms that are inclusive of women's resistance in many different contexts.
