This course explores socio-economic-political conditions that are considered necessary for immigrant and migrant women’s security for their development and full participation in the Canadian society. The concept of immigrant is used in a broad and comprehensive way – beyond the legal framework and “standard” societal perception. By exploring the role of the state, this course also examines the history and restructuring of immigration and settlement policies in Canada and how immigrants irrespective of gender, class, race, sexual orientation, age, nationality, ethnicity, and dis/ability have been affected by these policies. Key objectives of the course are to:

- Examine the history and role of institutions in facilitating transnational migration and different forms of migrant workers including refugees;
- Analyse various layers of commodification and erosion of skills related to immigrants and migrants;
- Explore the federal and provincial governments’ efforts to recognize immigrants’ credentials from countries of origin;
- Analyse the role of multiculturalism, citizenship, and social policies in immigrants’ and migrants’ lives;
