In this course we will focus on the lives of modern Canadian women and how our culture "creates" her, and we will look also at the efforts that women, personally and collectively, have made and are making to "recreate" themselves and a more equitable and humane society. In order to do this we will examine a wide range of questions, including:

- How do women and men talk to each other? What does this tell us about power?
- Why do women earn lower wages than men?
- Why is housework important work and who does the housework?
- How do women combine working outside the home with raising a family?
- What are special problems of minority women in Canada?
- What role does biology play in determining women's and men's roles?
- How do parents treat girl children differently than boy children, even if they think they're treating them the same?
- How do women view pornography?
- Can feminism be traced as far back as the 15th century?
- What are women doing today to change women's lives for the better?

Required Reading:

Still Ain't Satisfied: Canadian Feminism Today, Fitzgerald, M., Guberman, C., and Wolfe, M. (eds.)

The Edible Woman, Atwood, M.

Reading packets, available at cost from General Office, CC 9221.

Organization:

There will be three lecture/discussion hours and one tutorial hour per week.

Lectures: Mon. 1230 - 1420 K 9501 & Tutorials: Wed. 1330 - 1420 K 8504 OR
      Wed. 1230 - 1320 K 9501               Wed. 1530 - 1620 K 8505

Assignments:

20% Tutorial participation (including three short essays over the readings early in the term and one short oral report)

20% In class mid-term exam

30% 6-10 page essay

30% Final examination (during examination period)