In this course, we will examine some of the conceptualizations of, and interrelationships amongst gender, war and health, and focus on such topics as total war, the military/medical-industrial complex, militarism, healthism and professionalization in relation to societal constructions of gender roles in family, paid work and volunteer contexts.

Required Readings
(This will be available on Reserve in the library)

Assignments and grading structure
- 40% - position papers (four at 10% each, 5-6 pages each)
- 25% - research paper (10-12 pages)
- 25% - midterm exam
- 10% - attendance and participation

Prerequisites for WS 315:
One of WS 101, WS 102, GDST 200. Students who have taken WS 206 as Gender, War and Health cannot take this course for further credit.