Lecture: Tuesdays 12:30-14:20
Office hours: Tuesdays 10-11:30
Office: AQ 5105A

Course Description:
This course will examine the history of feminist consciousness and feminist resistance in Western cultures from prehistoric times to the early twentieth century. Topics that will be covered include definitions of feminisms, theories of the origins of patriarchies, women’s place and feminine symbolism in major western religions (Judaism, Christianity, Muslim, and Native American spiritualities); women’s struggle for formal education; women’s resistance of traditional gender roles; the development of equal rights and maternal feminisms, suffrage movements in Europe and North America, and the interaction of gender with other oppressions. The emphasis throughout the course will be on developing conceptions of feminisms that are inclusive of women’s resistance in many different contexts.
