Applying For a Post-Graduation Work Permit
(From WITHIN Canada Only)

When can I apply for my post-graduation work permit?
After you complete all requirements of a degree, diploma or certificate program of at least eight months’ duration, you can apply for a work permit that will allow you to work for up to three years after graduation (depending on your program length). You must submit your application within 90 days from the date you complete your program requirements. The date of your graduation ceremony [convocation] has no relation to the application period for a work permit. To apply, you must have a valid study permit. Keep in mind that if your current study permit was issued on or after June 1, 2014, it will automatically expire once the 90-day post-graduation work permit application period has elapsed, or on the expiry date printed on your study permit, whichever is earlier.

You can only get one post-graduation work permit in your lifetime, regardless of the number of credentials you complete. Please keep this in mind if you plan to pursue another program [e.g. graduate school] in Canada after you finish your studies at SFU.

How can I apply for my post-graduation work permit?
There are two options for applying:

1. Apply online
   Step 2. Apply online at http://www.cic.gc.ca/english/e-services/index.asp after creating a GCKey or Sign-in Partner login ID, and registering with MyCIC. Enter your Personal Checklist Code when prompted.
   Scan and upload all supporting documentation [see below]. Supporting documents should be current and original (unless it clearly states photocopies are acceptable). Refer to your online checklist for acceptable file formats.

How long will it take to receive my post-graduation work permit?
For information on processing times, please visit the IRCC website at http://www.cic.gc.ca/english/information/times/temp.asp

Can I begin my post-graduation work work before I receive the work permit?
You may begin working only if you have submitted your post-graduation work permit application, providing your study permit was still valid at the time you submitted your work permit application. Therefore, you should apply as soon as possible after completing your degree requirements.

Does my post-graduation work permit allow me to work for any employer?
Yes. Post-graduation work permits are issued as “open” work permits, so once you apply for and receive your post-graduation work permit you may work for ANY employer. You may also change employers within the period of authorization without applying for a change of conditions to your work permit.

How long will my work permit be valid?
The length of your degree/diploma program determines the length of your work permit. If the program of study is at least 2 years in length, you are eligible for a 3-year work permit. If you completed a program of less than 2 years in length, your work permit may be valid only for the length of the program.

Exception: Students who have completed a one-year graduate degree or diploma from SFU after having obtained, within the previous two years, a degree or diploma from an accredited post-secondary education/training institution in Canada may qualify for a three year work permit. This exception also applies to students who have left Canada temporarily between programs of study. The issuance of a work permit and the length of a work permit also depend on the validity of your passport. Although you may be eligible for a 3-year work permit, IRCC will not issue a work permit for longer than your passport is valid.

I’m from a country whose citizens require a temporary resident visa to enter Canada. Will I still need a TRV when I have a work permit?
Yes, if you wish to travel to have a valid temporary resident visa in addition to your post-graduation work permit in order to re-enter Canada. See http://www.cic.gc.ca/english/visit/cpp-p-apply.asp for in-Canada TRV application instructions. Please note: Starting fall 2016, visa-exempt foreign nationals who fly to or transit through Canada will need an Electronic Travel Authorization (eTA).

My spouse holds a work permit based on my study permit. Can he/she extend it based on my post-graduation work permit?
If you hold a post-graduation work permit, and are employed in a position listed at Skill Level 0, A or B in the National Occupational Classification http://www5.hrsdc.gc.ca/NOSC, your spouse may be eligible for an open work permit. If this is the case, your spouse must include the following supporting documents in his/her application for a work permit:
- A copy of your post-graduation work permit
- A letter from your employer confirming employment at level 0, A or B, or a copy of your employment offer or contract
