On December 6 1989 a lone gunman walked into an Engineering class at l’École Polytechnique de Montréal. After separating the men from the women, he proclaimed that he hated feminists and shot 14 women in the class and beyond solely because they were women. This day is the anniversary of the Montreal Massacre and reminds us of the importance of working against gender-based violence in our communities, in Canada and around the world.