The Faculty Structure Task Force has been established to consider whether Simon Fraser University’s current academic structure is one that best reflects its qualities and strengths and one that will enable it to most effectively and visibly advance its strategic goals.

The Task Force will be responsible for the following:

- Produce a Discussion Document for the University Community that includes:
  - A review of the evolution of SFU’s academic structure and enrolment trends
  - A review of academic structures at other Canadian institutions
  - An examination of SFU’s academic structure and its suitability to reflect and advance our strategic direction
  - A statement of principles under which realignment at SFU, if supported, should follow
- Engage in Broad Consultation on the Discussion Document with the University Community
- Develop a Recommendation on whether the University should develop and consult on a strategy for realignment

The Task Force will present its Discussion Document to the University Community by the end of April, 2006.
