Beginning September 2016, the SFU Department of Archaeology will offer two new graduate programs for applied archaeologists:

1. Professional Master’s Degree in Heritage Resource Management (thesis-based)

2. Graduate Certificate in Heritage Resource Management Archaeology (coursework-only)

These programs are for students who hold a BA or BSc (or equivalent) and have been employed in HRM for a year or more.

Program Elements

Three core elements constitute a world-class learning experience:

1. In-person participation in the program orientation in the first week of Fall classes.

2. Four online courses:
   - HRM Law and Policy
   - HRM Practice and Ethics
   - HRM Business and Management
   - HRM Research Design and Methods

3. And for MA candidates, a Master’s thesis, defended in person at SFU.

Program Benefits

- Designed by and for cultural heritage management archaeologists;
- Integration of ethical, legal, business, and research priorities;
- Master’s thesis fulfills requirements for specific jurisdictions and the Register for Professional Archaeologists;
- Online delivery of four required courses accommodates students with family and professional obligations and enables participation from those living outside of British Columbia and Canada.

Contact Information

HRM Program Director
Professor John R. Welch
welch@sfu.ca

Graduate Program Assistant
gpcarch@sfu.ca
tel: 778.782.4727
fax: 778.782.5666

Apply Now

Applications are now being accepted. Review of applications will begin on March 15, 2016.

http://www.sfu.ca/archaeology/hrm.html