

Clint Burnham teaches in the Department of English at SFU. His research interests include contemporary literature, cultural studies, Marxism, and psychoanalysis. He is at present working on two book-length projects: one on the Kootenay School of Writing, and another on Slavoj Zizek. His published works include book-length studies of the Canadian poet Steve McCaffery and the American theorist Fredric Jameson, and articles on imperialism & contemporary art, bpNichol, and hiphop.