

Dr. Valorie Crooks is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Geography at Simon Fraser University. Her area of specialty is health geography. A long-standing research interest relates to women's experiences of negotiating socio-spatial life after the onset of chronic illness, including in bodily and embodied ways. Her work on this topic has been published in journals such as Social Science & Medicine, Health & Place, and Disability & Rehabilitation.