Description and Schedule

Description

Objectives

This course is designed to provide an introduction to Latin American issues. We examine the major political, economic, and social issues through the different periods of Latin American history. Particular emphasis is given to the deeper roots of contemporary problems, including democratization, the military, economic development, inequity, and environmental destruction. The course uses a wide variety of materials, including historical texts, academic analyses, and films. The course will further develop oral presentation, analytical, and writing skills that students can use for future studies and work. The course is accessible to any student with an interest in Latin America.

Required Readings

I have written a customized textbook for this course. We will also rely upon an assembled set of readings from diverse sources, including historical, political, and economic analyses, as well as literature and films.

Hira, Anil. Latin American Issues for a New Generation. 2009.

You can download each chapter of the book from my website at your convenience.

You should also purchase the custom courseware package from the bookstore. When our library has a book with a reading on custom courseware, I will also place it on reserve.

Assignments

Readings are very reasonable in volume, but students are expected to examine, consider, and react to them before the class discussion. I would suggest making electronic notes for each reading and bringing them to class. Active participation is a must.

The assignments are the following:

- 1- Active participation and thorough preparation
- 2- 2 of 3 short (5 pp.) essays that give the student the chance to synthesize the material and provide his/her developed point of view about a country/issue. Suggested short essay questions are listed in the syllabus. See my website for tips on research and writing.
- 3- Two examinations derived directly from the material in class. Students will use the material to provide their own analysis on selected Latin American issues that have been discussed in class.

Pls. bring the course reader to class and tutorials- time permitting, we may read and discuss some of these important texts.

Grading

The assignments will be graded proportionally as follows:

- participation, including attendance 15%
- mid-term examination, 25%
- 2 short essays of 5-7 pp., 30% (15% each) (choose any 2 of 3)
- final examination, 30%

Assignments are due at the beginning of class. See my website for grading and other policies. Essays should be analytical arguments around a thesis, not just summaries.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism, or the use or ascription of someone else's work as your own, is a serious offence. For university policies, please see <http://www.sfu.ca/policies/Students/index.html> and <http://students.sfu.ca/academicintegrity>

Office Hours

Office hours are M-F 9-4 except during class times and by appointment. I generally do not mind students dropping in without an appointment unless the issue requires significant time. You can drop me a quick e-mail to set up a time; I will usually reply that day. I do have other meetings at times, but will try my best to accommodate. There will be a class e-mail list for discussion.
