

What some of my students are doing now

Andy Hira

Updated: May 2011

I measure my success as a teacher by my students' long-term success. Obviously, I can't take responsibility or credit for what students do after they graduate, but based on feedback from students I have helped them to begin to develop solid careers. If you are a former student, let me know so I can add you to this list to inspire future students (and me)! Here are some examples:

Maritz T- earned a PhD and is teaching International Development at U of Sussex

Asmaa S.- completed an MA in SAIS Bologna in international relations

Ihab S- completed a law degree at U de Montréal

Jonathan H.- made it into the US Foreign Service

Jane K- completing a World Rotary Fellowship and an MA in IR in Argentina

Jennifer K- worked at Foreign Policy magazine for a while and then went to law school to focus on environmental law

Libardo A- working for the BC government on indigenous legal issues

Alex A- worked for the Pan American Health Organization, now working for the World Bank

Mike M- research director at NAIT

Jared F- working as a free lance international journalist; completed tours in Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, and Cambodia

Johnna M- completed a PhD in GPE at Sussex and is working as a researcher at the European Social Research Institute

Raymond H- worked for CIDA; completed an MA in Argentina on international technology development on a Rotary scholarship; presently doing a development internship in Malaysia

Nelly C.- completed an internship in Guyana and now completing an MA in Planning

Alex L- working for the Canadian federal government in a management position

Yusuf R.- got into the Canadian Foreign Service, and is now working at the Canadian Embassy in Cairo

Alisa V- completing a PhD in Russian Studies at Oxford U

Sergio P- working for the BC Government in Victoria in evaluation

Danielle B- completing a joint MA/LLB in international studies/law at NYU

Ana Maria B- working for the United Way as a community organizer

Morgan B- completing an MA in International Development at Guelph U.; completed a tour with CIDA working in Ghana on rural development

Rick S- got into the Canadian foreign service

Ashley B- working for Indian Affairs and Northern Development Canada

Susie H- got into the MA program in Journalism at UWO

Catherine C- working on a PhD program at UBC in community health issues