Sound structure micro-workshop
June 15, 1:45 pm onward

Location: SFU Harbour Centre, 2220 RBC Dominion Securities Room

Schedule

1:45, coffee, introductions

2:00, Peggy Mok, Cantonese tone acquisition by simultaneous bilingual children

2:20, Dr. Zoe Lam, What you heard versus what makes sense: Tone identification strategies used by Cantonese-dominant and English-dominant bilinguals

2:40, Elise McClay, Senay Cebioglu, Tanya Broesch, & Henny Yeung, Babytalk is not always WEIRD: Distinct acoustic characteristics of infant- versus adult-directed speech in Lenakel (Austronesian) and English (Indo-European)

2:40, Elise McClay, Senay Cebioglu, Tanya Broesch, & Henny Yeung, Babytalk is not always WEIRD: Distinct acoustic characteristics of infant- versus adult-directed speech in Lenakel (Austronesian) and English (Indo-European)

3:00, Keith Leung & Yue Wong, Production-perception relationship of Mandarin tones as revealed by critical perceptual cues stretching break

3:30, Bryan Gick, Voice quality, pitch and tone in an embodied larynx

3:50, Michael Fry, Tone inventories as hypothesized by machine

Poster Presentations (4:10 – 5:00)

Xiaolin Li and Peggy Mok, The acquisition of Xiamen tone sandhi by children

Claire Moore-Cantwell, Dave Kush, Not all wug-tests are created equal: Cognitive load impairs access to the phonological grammar

Jane Li, John Alderete, Heikal Badrulhisham, Type and token frequency of Cantonese sound structure

Bruce Wiebe, On the level: how phonological and other assumptions impact orthography development”.

Lauretta Cheng, Khia Johnson, and Molly Babel, Bilingual Word Familiarity in Cantonese and English

Khia Johnson, Information-Theoretic Variables in Spanish-English Bilingual Speech