Suggested Reading

General reading

References on selected topics

History of mapping (Chapter 1)

Warkentin, J., 1974, Discovering the shape of Canada. artscanada, 188/189, 17-35.

Map projections (Chapter 7)
References

Photogrammetry and aerial photograph interpretation (Chapter 8)

Thematic Mapping (Chapter 9)

General references

Evaluating shapes and shading of symbols used on thematic maps

There is a very substantial literature on human perception of shape, shading and colour and how it relates to the use of symbols on thematic maps. The bibliography to follow is not comprehensive by any means but it will point the interested reader in the right direction to gain access to this interesting and important aspect of thematic mapping.
References

Muller, Jean-Claude, 1979, Perception of continuously shaded maps. *Annals of the Association of References

American Geographers: 69, 240-249.

Computer Cartography, Remote Sensing, and Geographic Information Systems

Although these topics are not covered in this book, they represent the next step in developing your cartographic skills and are taken up in subsequent courses such as Geography 350. The few references to follow will give you a feel for this material.

