COURSE OBJECTIVES AND PREREQUISITES

This course surveys a variety of topics in international finance and open-economy macroeconomics, including: the foreign exchange market, exchange rate determination, Purchasing Power Parity, the Mundell-Fleming model of output and exchange rate determination under fixed and flexible exchange rates, speculative attacks and the causes and consequences of international financial crises. The course will also discuss various recent policy debates. We will discuss the role of global imbalances in the recent financial crisis, and several recent proposals to reform the international financial system.

The only prerequisites for the course are a previous course in microeconomics and a previous course in macroeconomics. Although there are no mathematical prerequisites, much of the material is analytical in nature, and students should feel comfortable manipulating graphs and simple algebraic equations.

COURSE STRUCTURE

Roughly speaking, the course is divided into two main parts. The first half focuses on theory and the second half focuses on policy. The hope is that the theory you learn in the first half will help provide better answers to the policy questions discussed in the second half.

The best way to learn international finance is to do it. Therefore, an important part of this course are the section meetings and problem sets. There are three TAs for the course: Nick Dadson (jnd@sfu.ca), Ted Li (teddyl@sfu.ca), and Callum McLeod (callumm@sfu.ca). The problem sets are available as PDF files on the class webpage. (Note: There are no tutorials during the first week).

COURSE MATERIALS

There is one required book for this course: International Economics: Theory and Policy, by Paul Krugman and Maurice Obstfeld (8th Edition, 2009) published by Addison-Wesley. Recently, this book has been made available in two parts - the first part covers international trade theory, and the second part covers international finance. Since we won’t be covering trade theory, a cheaper alternative is to just purchase the second half, which has been made available through custom courseware, and can be purchased at the bookstore.

There are also a few journal articles and supplementary notes that will be available for download on the course webpage.
