Surita Parashar, Ph.D. is a Research Scientist at the BC Centre for Excellence in HIV/AIDS with a background in qualitative health research methods, and a commitment to participatory, community-based approaches to research that meaningfully engage people marginalized by social structural inequity. Her current program of research is based on a prospective cohort study conducted in partnership with Simon Fraser University, the BC Centre for Excellence in HIV/AIDS, and McLaren Housing Society of BC, and funded through a CIHR Population Health Intervention Research grant. This multi-method evaluation investigates the impact of a supportive housing complex on the health of individuals and families affected by HIV and at risk of homelessness, a study that stemmed from Surita's doctoral research at Simon Fraser University's Faculty of Health Sciences.
