SNF Athens Internship Program

The Stavros Niarchos Foundation Centre for Hellenic Studies at Simon Fraser University is pleased to be able to offer an internship opportunity to a qualified student at the Stavros Niarchos Foundation, one of the world’s leading private international philanthropic organizations.

The Stavros Niarchos Foundation offers a limited number of internships to qualified candidates interested in exploring the world of philanthropy and not-for-profit organizations. The internships provide the opportunity to gain insight into the operations of a philanthropic organization and to experience and understand the philosophy and work of different grantees/organizations that offer a variety of services and programs in the areas of arts & culture, social welfare, education, and health and medicine.

The internship occurs in the Fall at the Foundation’s offices in Athens, Greece and lasts for approximately four to eight weeks. While knowledge of the Greek language is helpful, it is not required, as the work of the intern is performed in English. Travel and accommodation are included and a modest stipend is provided.

Criteria

Candidates must possess strong written and oral communications skills in English, as well as computer skills, and the ability to work in a flexible and fast-paced environment. Demonstrated tact and mature judgement is also expected. High academic achievement and volunteer experience will also be highly regarded. While the competition is open to all SFU undergraduate students, preference will be given to students enrolled in the Hellenic Studies Certificate Program.
