(Revised)

Women's Studies 001, Issues in Women's Health and Health Care, is designed to investigate health and health care as they affect the lives of women. Since physical well-being cannot be separated from health delivery systems, those topics in physiology and in institutions affecting health will be covered. Both physiology and the effect of Canadian medical, legal, religious and educational institutions on women's health care will be covered in the course. Physiology is covered more extensively in the first half of the course to give students the basic knowledge of women's health care needs and to help them evaluate the ways in which the health care services meet these needs or fail to meet them. As with all 00 offerings, this course is designed to present information on selected topics for students who may not wish to pursue a minor in Women's Studies. This course will not count toward credit for the Women's Studies minor.

COURSE ASSIGNMENTS:

A term project on one aspect of Canadian Health Care which will focus on some aspect from the second half of the course. The project will consist of 1) a written report, and 2) a presentation to the student's tutorial group.

There have been requests for advanced courses in Women's Studies by students who are not pursuing the minor programme. Since Women's Studies does not have the faculty resources to design a specific 300 level course, the selected topics course will provide a format to offer a 300 level course from time to time as faculty availability and interest permit. Although the course may be taken by anyone who has accumulated 60 credit hours, the minor student may take it for credit toward the minor programme.

Topics

Women's Studies 301 is designed to cover topics that will not require students to have a background in Women Studies. In contrast the W.S. 300 course is designed to cover topics that require students to have nine units in Women's Studies. Examples of possible W.S. 301 topics would include: Women and the Professions, or Feminist Utopias. Both of these topics deal with the role of women, but do not require specific knowledge covered in lower level Women's Studies courses. Examples of possible W.S. 300 topics include: Women and Psychoanalysis, or Regional Studies of Women in Canada. The Women and Psychoanalysis course would draw heavily from the material covered in W.S. 100, W.S. 200 and W.S. 203 including the historical analysis of the period around the development of psychoanalysis and the analysis of women's roles in contemporary societies. Regional Studies of Women in Canada would draw from the material in W.S. 100, W.S. 201, and W.S. 202 including the historical studies of Women in Canada and the analysis of women's status in Canadian society today.
