MEMORANDUM

To: Mrs. Janet Blanchet
Interdisciplinary Studies
Subject: '78-'79 Undergraduate Calendar
Changes

From: Dr. E.A. Fattah
Criminology Department
Date: November 2, 1977

The Criminology Department Undergraduate Curriculum Committee has considered the prerequisites for the following upper level courses:

CRIMINOLOGY 302 - Critical Approach to Crime and Deviance

CRIMINOLOGY 312 - Criminological Perspectives on Social Problems

CRIMINOLOGY 313 - Specific Types of Crimes

and has approved the following changes.

The prerequisites for

CRIMINOLOGY 302 should be CRIM. 101, 102, 103, 104

CRIMINOLOGY 312 should be CRIM. 101 & 132

CRIMINOLOGY 313 should be CRIM. 101 & 102

We hope that these changes can be approved by the Faculty of Interdisciplinary Studies Undergraduate Curriculum Committee at its meeting of November 3, 1977, so that they may appear in the new calendar.

Please note that this document replaces I.S.C. 77-37.

MEMORANDUM

To Mrs. Janet Blanchet, Assistant to the Dean, Faculty of Interdisciplinary Studies

From Ezzat A. Fattah

Department of Criminology

Subject 1978/79 Calendar Changes

Date 3 November 1977

The prerequisites for CRIM 302-3 "Critical Approach to Crime and Deviance", currently read as follows:

CRIM 101, 102, 103, 104 or 132.

Since as it stands now, the reading of the prerequisites might be confusing, since some of the students might be under the impression that CRIM 132 is an alternative to the four courses previously listed, the calendar entry should be changed to clarify this. The intent was that students would take 101, 102, 103 and either 104 or 132.

To avoid the confusion, and in the light of the experience of past semesters, the Departmental Undergraduate Curriculum Committee has decided to remove CRIM 132 altogether, keeping the other four courses as prerequisites. The reason why all four courses are considered essential before taking CRIM 302 is as follows: CRIM 302 is a critique of traditional criminological theory and of the conventional approaches to the problems of crime and punishment. It only seems reasonable that students be familiar with these before being able to criticize them. This traditional theory and conventional approaches are taught in the four courses listed as prerequisites. In addition, all except CRIM 102 are required courses for all Criminology majors.
