HUMANITIES MINOR PROGRAM

p. 149

NEW COURSE PROPOSAL

HUM. 390-3 Directed Studies in Humanities

SEE APPENDIX A

RATIONALE:

A directed studies course in the humanities would allow students who have taken the regular courses to pursue further individual study in areas of the humanities. Given that the program is small and will remain a minor program, a further directed study course would enhance the student's choices without expanding the program's core program. The course will also benefit those students who do not choose to complete the minor but who wish to continue study in areas not regularly offered by departments or by the Humanities program. It should be understood that the topics would have a conceptual or historical relationship to the Humanities.

CHANGE OF DESCRIPTION

HUM. 400-5 Humanities Proseminar

FROM: This course requires the completion of a substantial essay on an approved topic related to the Humanities. The essay will be written under the supervision of one of the faculty members from the Committee on the Humanities. In addition, students will participate in a series of colloquia which are held in conjunction with the course.

TO: This course requires undertaking substantial research culminating in the completion of an essay on a humanities topic which has been approved by the Steering Committee. The essay will be written under the supervision of a faculty member on the Humanities Committee or a faculty member designated by the Committee. In addition students will participate in colloquia held in conjunction with the course.

SEE APPENDIX B

RATIONALE:

The change of course description makes it explicit that the Steering Committee may wish to allow faculty outside of the Committee to supervise the essay. This will allow greater flexibility in the administration of the program and will allow students more latitude in finding a suitable supervisor.
