Revision of G.G.R. 1.7.6

Motion

That SGSC recommend to Senate that graduate course credits completed as part of a SFU graduate diploma, prior to admission to a master's program, be applied to the requirements for the degree provided a minimum grade of "B" was achieved in the course, and that no more than 50 percent of the overall degree course requirements are completed by advance credit.

Rationale

Presently, both the Beedie School of Business and the Faculty of Education have graduate diplomas that are designed to ladder into their professional master's programs. At present, students either do not apply to receive their credential until they have made a decision as to whether they wish to pursue their master's degree (sometimes waiting as long as three years) or the academic unit requests a waiver of the courses in the master's program for those courses completed as part of the diploma program. The change to the GGR 1.7.6 proposed in the motion would address the laddering of certificates or diploma's at the graduate level in a formal way. In addition, SGSC feels that courses completed up to three years previously should be considered for advance credit and thus has proposed that the regulation reflect this change from two years.
