RE Renaming of the Institute for Research on Early Education and Child Health (REACH)

DATE August 23, 2012

Attached is a letter from Dr. Maureen Hoskyn, requesting that the name of the Institute for Research on Early Education and Child Health (REACH) be changed to the Centre for Research on Early Child Health and Education (CRECHE). There is a research centre operating at the University of Victoria that is named REACH, causing confusion to donors and to many of the members of the community where they conduct research and programs. Also, the name change more accurately reflects it's status as a research centre

I recommend approval. Once approved by SCUP the request should be sent to Senate and the Board of Governors for information.

Motion:

That SCUP approve the name of the Institute for Research on Early Education and Child Health (REACH) be changed to the Centre for Research on Early Child Health and Education (CRECHE).

Dr. Mario Pinto,
Vice-President Research,
SFU, Burnaby, B.C.

Dear Dr. Pinto,

I am writing this memo to request that the Institute for Research on Early Child Health and Education (REACH) be renamed to the Centre for Research on Early Child Health and Education (CRECHE). There is a research centre operating at the University of Victoria that is named REACH, and we find that this is causing confusion to donors and to many of the members of the community where we conduct research and programs.

Our proposed name accurately reflects the past and current activities of our research centre. This name change has been discussed with, and approved by Dr. Kris Magnussen, the Dean of the Faculty of Education.

Kind regards,

Maureen Hoskyn,
Executive Director.
