Graduate Certificate in History

Full Program Proposal

January 2019

Department of History

Executive Summary

The Graduate Certificate in History offers training to students for careers as educators, researchers, and professionals in fields that value primary-source research, writing, and critical analysis of the past and present. Students gain expertise in historiography and historical methods; engage with, interpret and evaluate historical evidence as well as theoretical, conceptual, and ideological perspectives; and learn disciplined reading, writing, research, and oral communication skills essential to the independent and collaborative tasks desired in varied professional and community settings. Courses are taught by full-time faculty in the SFU Department of History and are flexibly offered during late afternoons, evenings, and summer breaks to accommodate the work schedules of participants who are teachers in secondary schools.

PART A

Proposed credential to be awarded

Graduate Certificate in History

Location of program

Simon Fraser University (Burnaby, Surrey, and/or Vancouver)

Academic unit offering proposed program

Department of History in the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences

Anticipated program start date

Spring 2020

Anticipated completion time

Minimum possible length is one term, maximum expected length is four terms.

Summary of proposed program

a) Aims, goals and/or objectives of the proposed program

Secondary teachers have approached the Department of History to express interest in receiving graduate training in history. The Graduate Certificate in History offers advanced training and a meaningful credential to secondary teachers and others who are seeking a course-based program and who are not yet certain whether they want to complete a thesis-based MA program. The certificate will also serve as an option for students who do not yet meet admissions requirements for the MA program. Students in the certificate program who successfully complete three courses may transfer to the MA program in history, conditional on identifying a supervisory committee and approval from the Graduate Program Committee. The certificate will also offer a meaningful credential for students enrolled in the MA program who are unable to (or decide not to) complete their thesis.

b) Anticipated contribution of the proposed program to the mandate and strategic plan of the institution

SFU's strategic vision as an "engaged university" aims to "develop new programs for mature, returning and non-traditional students" and to "improve community access."¹ By offering flexible scheduling and responding to demand from mature secondary school teachers and others, the Graduate Certificate in History will contribute to SFU becoming Canada's most community-engaged research university.

c) Potential areas/sectors of employment for graduates and/or opportunities for further study.

Students in the graduate certificate program may seek careers or career advancement as educators, information management professionals, and researchers. They may also be employable in other fields that value primary-source research, writing, and critical analysis of the past and present. Students who enroll in the certificate program may choose to pursue an MA in history by applying to the MA program, completing additional courses, and a thesis.

d) Delivery methods

Courses will be taught in person as seminars or directed readings.

e) Related programs in the institution or other British Columbia post-secondary institutions.

None.

PART B

PROGRAM DETAILS

a) Graduation requirements, target audience

The certificate will include four history graduate courses (20 units). The first will be History 814, Historical Methods (5). The other three courses will be chosen from the following list of already existing courses (no new courses will be proposed), for a minimum of 15 additional units:

HIST 801 - Selected Topics in History (5)

HIST 805 - The North American West (5)

HIST 806 - Themes in Canadian History (5)

HIST 810 - Themes in European History (5)

HIST 821 - Early Modern World (5)

HIST 822 - Themes in British and Irish History (5)

HIST 843 - Themes in United States History (5)

HIST 845 - Themes in Latin American History (5)

HIST 852 - Themes in Middle Eastern History (5)

HIST 870 - Themes in Asian History (5)

HIST 872 - The City in History (5)

HIST 879 - Environmental History (5)

HIST 882 - Oral History (5)

HIST 883 - Film and History (5)

HIST 887 - Comparative Labor History (5)

HIST 888 - Indigenous History

HIST 889 - Colonialism/Post-Colonialism (5)

HIST 890 - Gender and History (5)

HIST 892 - Religion and Society (5)

HIST 894 - War and Society (5)

HIST 896 - Race and Ethnicity (5)

HIST 897 - Supervised Readings (5)

Students are expected to complete the certificate in four terms. A work experience/practicum term is not required for program completion.

The target audience is secondary teachers and others interested in enhancing their ability to explain change over time by taking rigorous graduate-level courses in historical methods and historiography.

b) Admission requirements

Applicants will be required to meet the minimum University requirements for a Graduate Certificate as per GGR 1.3.2a.

c) Evidence of student interest and labour market demand

Secondary school teachers (National Occupational Classification 4031) are the main demographic that has already expressed interest in advancing their careers by pursuing graduate study in history at SFU. SFU History faculty and staff have organized focus groups and workshops at the British Columbia Secondary School Teachers Association Annual Professional Development Conference over the past five years, introducing the skills and knowledge students can gain via advanced graduate study in history and attracting interest from numerous secondary teachers and teachers-in-training. Other secondary teachers and teachers-in-training have inquired about graduate study in history by contacting the SFU Department of History's Graduate Program Chair and Graduate Program Assistant. The results of the focus groups and workshops indicate that teachers want training in historiography, research methods, and essay writing in a history department, rather than training in pedagogy, a field in which they are already well-versed. See the attached letter of support from the BCSSTA.

According to WorkBC, 19,400 secondary school teachers are employed in British Columbia and ten-year expected job openings add up to 6,750.² In other words, this sector is growing; likewise, demand for a credential that offers career advancement is growing.

Aside from secondary school teachers, undergraduates pursuing a major or minor in history will be interested in pursuing a Graduate Certificate in History, either as a step toward a career that requires the ability to explain change over time, or as a step toward an MA program in history. In 2017–2018, the SFU Department of History had 349 approved majors and minors (238 majors and 111 minors).³

d) Eligibility for scholarships, awards, and financial aid

The Financial Aid office confirms that this program will not qualify for student loan and grant funding, but that Graduate Certificate students may apply for SFU bursaries, provided they are enrolled full-time in the term of application. See attached message.

RESOURCES

a) Enrolment Plan

² <https://www.workbc.ca/Jobs-Careers/Explore-Careers/Browse-Career-Profile/4031#view-full-profile>

³ http://www.sfu.ca/content/dam/sfu/irp/departments/hist_tables.pdf

Anticipated student enrolment over first three years is ten or eleven students per year, assuming that of the fifteen secondary school teachers who have already expressed interest in graduate studies in history at SFU, five enroll each year. In addition, we also expect that 4 or 5 of the 349 approved majors and minors in History at SFU would enroll in the certificate each year, plus 2 or 3 students each year from other institutions and professions.

b) Resources required and/or available to implement the program (financial and personnel) including any new faculty appointments

Full-time faculty in the Department of History already teach the required and optional courses that will be offered for the Graduate Certificate in History and would welcome additional students in those classes. Therefore no additional resources beyond what is already devoted to the MA program in history will be required. The Graduate Certificate in History will not impact, reduce, or eliminate other programs or resources within the Department of History, nor will teaching in this program impact teaching loads in other programs.

c) Faculty members' teaching/supervision

Faculty members who have taught the courses in the PROGRAM DETAILS section in recent years are listed below. Other faculty who have not taught graduate courses in recent years may teach them in future years. All teaching in the Graduate Certificate in History program will be a part of faculty's regular teaching load and will not affect their responsibilities in other programs.

Dr. Ilya Vinkovetsky, Associate Professor, Modern Russia and Soviet Union
Dr. Sarah Walshaw, Senior Lecturer, Africa
Dr. Aaron Windel, Assistant Professor, Modern Britain and the British Empire

d) Proposed tuition and other program fees including a justification

Tuition will be charged on a per unit basis so that mature professionals may take courses on a flexible or part-time timetable that allows them to continue as working secondary school teachers. We propose a per-unit tuition fee that corresponds to the basic per unit fee set by the university (currently $282.44 per unit). Expected enrolment is ten students per year for the first three years. Because the certificate program adds a small number of new students to existing classes and does not require additional resources, we do not estimate total costs or a break-even point. There is no minimum enrolment required to run the program. This is not a revenue generating program; student tuition goes to the university. Broader benefits accrue to society by increasing the number of expert secondary teachers, thereby enhancing the educational experience for multiple generations of secondary school students in British Columbia.
