Outside the classroom.
Outside the status quo.
Outside the traditional.

Outside is where change takes place.

Step outside familiar boundaries, and engage the world head-on.

Because making a difference outside, also makes a difference in you.

So go ahead, think outside.
We’ll meet you there.
From her first day at SFU, Marina knew she wanted to get involved and explore the opportunities available to her as a student. Currently the Co-Chair of the Geography Student Union, Marina also took on an eight-month co-op placement at the Vancouver Airport Authority. In this role, Marina helped the airport meet the goals outlined in its Environmental Management Plan by collecting data on monthly commuter traffic, waste-sorting compliance, water conservation, and emissions.
TROY BOUCHER
PSYCHOLOGY

Troy first got involved with the Autism and Developmental Disorders Lab as a work-study student in 2016. Now the Lab Manager, Troy oversees research studies, leads data entry and analyses, and manages events hosted by the lab. He also runs the SFU Social Science Summer Camp and trains the student volunteer staff. Children at the camp, some with Autism Spectrum Disorders, participate in activities that explore topics such as brain waves and imaging, and learn to recognize and label their emotions.

WHY MAKE A DIFFERENCE
ONE DAY

WHEN YOU CAN START ON DAY ONE?
Josh Kim’s passion for sports data and analytics led him to pursue a degree in Statistics. At SFU, you’ll get an actionable education. In other words, smart thinking applied to actually doing. This often means leaving familiar comfort zones and breaking new ground, sometimes with unexpected collaborators. Regardless of your faculty, we’ll encourage you to abandon a conventional viewpoint and seek out innovative solutions that can shape communities, and influence society. This philosophy, combined with tangible professional skills, means that when you graduate you’ll begin the adventure to success with purpose and possibility.

OUTSIDE THE ORDINARY

FINANCIAL AND CAREER SUPPORT

You don’t need straight As to help pay for your education. Last year, our Financial Aid & Awards office conferred over $18,000,000 in scholarships, awards, bursaries, and work-study funding, and processed more than $58,000,000 in Canadian and US government student loans and grants, helping almost 10,000 students in some way.

Career planning also makes good financial sense. But recent Statistics Canada research showed that only 16% of 25-year-olds have the same career ideas they had at 17. In a world that’s constantly changing, that’s no surprise — and that’s why our career professionals are ready to help with resources, tools, and advice to help you start planning for a career well before your final years at SFU.
Meet an SFU alumnus, and you’ll notice a certain approachability, compassion, and a desire to try things differently. Talk to them a while longer, and you’ll also see their fearlessness and ‘can do’ attitude shine through, affecting everything they do.

We can’t take full credit for this—these are qualities that our students already have. But it does demonstrate that we attract those who share our unconventional approach and our belief that creative collaboration with real purpose has the power to truly engage. Of course, this means that SFU might not suit everyone—and that’s okay, too.
Health Sciences student Shayla Swann worked as a research assistant in a team that investigated the antiretroviral properties of sea sponges.

Born during the turbulent 1960s, SFU has always had something ‘alternative’ about it, which means you get more than a traditional education. We believe in shaking things up and asking difficult questions, even ones that make us uncomfortable. And in order to maintain this revolutionary thinking and stay relevant, we don’t just change with the times, we seek to influence them.

To achieve our next wave of success, we have to focus on today. That’s where you come in. Because, as your partner in an education that’s always evolving, we want you to be part of what shapes us.
Theories only get you so far. That’s why at SFU you’ll spend some time out in the field, connecting with real people and real issues. Problem-solving, lateral thinking, and adaptability need this context—so don’t be surprised if you sometimes find yourself learning outside the classroom as part of a field school, a co-op work term, or a research project.

We also offer entrepreneurship and innovation courses. Because by developing skills in this immersive and experiential way during your studies, you’ll be well-equipped to solve real-world challenges.
When you apply to SFU, you will choose a faculty and a program. But that’s just where you start. Once you’re here, you’ll have the freedom to explore different courses, programs, and disciplines. Where and when you’ll discover your story remains to be seen (and that, we think, is part of the fun).
Brennan Strandberg-Salmon spent his summer on a co-op placement working as a water conservation advisor for the City of Vancouver.

We don’t believe in waiting to make an impact. We prefer to get right on it. As Canada’s engaged university, SFU has built an extensive network of hundreds of local, provincial, and international community and research partners. By maximizing this connection with the outside world, we’re able to make an immediate impact on it.

We believe communities teach us as much as we teach them. In fact, this winning formula of engagement and innovation is a principle that applies to everything we do. And because of this, SFU continues to be an instrument of change, committed to solving the real issues of the day. Every day.
It’s perhaps unfair to consider your SFU years as just an education, when it’s such a pivotal period in your life as a whole. In fact, the entire SFU community is committed to giving you the richest, most inspiring, personal, and well-rounded student experience. And it’s yours for the taking. Among the many appealing reasons for choosing SFU, the highlight has to be meeting like-minded people with whom you can share the unique West Coast lifestyle.

INDIGENOUS STUDENT SUPPORT

SFU seeks to engage all students and is committed to helping them realize their full potential. For Indigenous students, we provide gathering spaces like the Indigenous Student Centre. Here you’ll meet elders, peer cousins, and tutors, for academic support workshops, cultural events, and a study area. The Indigenous Student Centre’s vision is for Indigenous students to succeed and thrive, as our Ancestors envisioned, with a balance of culture, tradition, and academic success.

NCAA

SFU is proud to be the only Canadian university to participate in the NCAA, with many student athletes going on to compete in the Olympics. Whether you’re an athlete or a keen spectator, you’ll be in the right place for basketball, cross-country, football, golf, soccer, softball, swimming & diving, track & field, volleyball, and wrestling.

OUTDOORS AND CULTURE

The unrivalled outdoor experiences in a stunning natural playground, combined with a thriving arts and culture scene, help explain why Vancouver is constantly voted as one of the world’s top three cities. To say you’ll feel inspired at SFU is an understatement. It’ll be your home for a few years, but you’ll feel at home within days.

HOUSING

Immerse yourself in the university experience and explore extracurricular opportunities by living in residence. You’ll live minutes away from your classes and friends, so you’ll feel more involved in the vibrant campus community around you. Students who live in residence have been shown to have greater academic success, and an easier transition into university. All residence rooms are private single rooms.
In keeping with our mandate to remain engaged and open, our campuses are strategically situated in a series of key locations, as opposed to one huge campus. The intentional philosophy behind this comes down to staying relevant. We can continue to integrate better with communities, while fostering a less insular campus outlook.

Our Burnaby campus with its stunning views from atop Burnaby Mountain is an easy drive or transit trip from Vancouver. The Surrey campus is a vibrant community hub also housing specialized programs and facilities, and is central to revitalization and city planning initiatives. Meanwhile, our downtown Vancouver campuses include a dedicated Centre for Dialogue; our new innovation lab on the edge of the Downtown Eastside, whose primary agenda is social projects; and our School for the Contemporary Arts. Students may use different campuses during their time here.
