Preparation for exchange

I attended the July session of the ISU at WU, which offers two courses over the course of three weeks. They also offer an August session and you can apply for either or both. I knew that I did not want to go away for a full semester, so this made it easy to choose where I wanted to go on exchange. I looked at other partial summer exchanges, but Vienna was my top choice after hearing from other students I knew who had gone there. Coming from a German background, I also wanted to go to a place where I would be able to practice my German. Choosing the courses is very easy as they only offer three to choose from for each of the weeks. I did not need any of the courses so I just chose the ones that interested me and I was able to get my first choice for both. I went over a week and a half before the start of the program and stayed a week and a half afterwards to travel. Luckily, having a mother who is a flight attendant and also family in Germany made figuring out transportation very easy. Trains and buses are very frequent and cheap, however in the summer booking trains in advance does make it cheaper than waiting last minute. It is best to always have cash on hand as many smaller stores and restaurants do not accept cards, and when travelling on the weekends it is much easier just to exchange Euros than CAD. Since the exchange program was less than 6 months, I did not have to apply for a student visa.

During Exchange

I arrived in Vienna on Saturday, July 8 and spent that night in a hotel with my family who I had been travelling with. We spent the day exploring the city and I was able to get a feel for it before the program started. On the Sunday I moved into my dorm. All 60 undergraduate students were at Molkereistraße, which was a very convenient 7-10 min walk to the campus. Although an older building, the rooms were large and each apartment (2-4 people) had their own kitchen and bathroom. The 60 graduate students were at Gasgasse, which was farther away and they needed to use the U-bahn to get to campus. Luckily there is a U2 stop very close by at Messe-Prater and it is very easy to get around. Both the campus and the dorms were a 5 min walk from Prater, which is Vienna’s version of Playland. It is free to get in and you only pay for rides. It has many nice restaurants and also had a music festival one week.

Monday morning was our campus tour and orientation. Everyone was given a welcome package that included: maps of the campus, city and U-bahn system; a monthly transit pass; and a local SIM card (many people experienced issues with these, but the program assistants were very helpful in sorting everything out). Breakfast and lunch are provided Mon-Fri in the school’s Mensa. They had multiple options and the lunch portions were quite large. If you preferred to eat elsewhere you could use your coupons for snacks during the day instead.

Each day classes were held from 9-1pm. There were 120 students in total, with 60 in the undergraduate program and 60 in the graduate program. The International Office also organized many optional after-lecture social activities that included include: a city tour, Ottakringer brewery tour, Opera tour, many dinners, a visit to Schloss Schönbrunn, Schloss Belevedere and multiple museums. As a horse-lover I also made sure to visit the famous Spanish Riding School at the Hofberg Palace. Unfortunately, there are no performances during July as the horses get a break, but the guided tour was very interesting.

Although it is a very intense program and a very busy three weeks, you are able to do and see so much. The classes seemed to vary in the amount of work involved, but nothing was too overwhelming. You are required to do some pre-course assignments before arrival. Some classes were more of a lecture format while others were very interactive, but everyone seemed to enjoy them and the different professors.

Reflection After Exchange

I absolutely loved Vienna. I had never been there before and now it will always have a place in my heart. Meeting people from all over the world was one of the highlights of the program and I now have friends in so many different places. Having the opportunity to explore new countries is also an amazing opportunity. There is nothing planned on weekends so I would recommend planning weekend trips either within Austria or to neighbouring countries. They can be planned easily once you get to know other people in the program and buses are quite cheap. I was able to visit Budapest, Bratislava and Prague. Other advice would be to plan for all sort of weather. It was very hot and humid most days so we could get showers passing through later in the day. Another thing to note is that most stores are closed on Sundays in Austria so do your grocery shopping during the rest of the week or you will find it hard to find things open (although there are often convenience stores at some of the bigger U-bahn and train stations open).
