

WE'RE HIRING

Regional Practice Lead, Early Years

Are you passionate about Maternal Child health? Does the opportunity to support families and children early in life inspire you and guide your nursing practice?

Vancouver Coastal Health (VCH) is currently searching for a Regional Practice Initiatives Lead for our Early Years Program to develop and lead the practice of this critical Public Health Program.

About the Early Years, Regional Prevention Program

Preventing and intervening in traumatic events helps families build resilience and makes a difference in a child's life. It plays a critical role in healthy relationships, reducing stress and supporting core skills in preventing and mitigating the impact of adverse childhood experiences (ACES). Our Early Years teams are in a unique position to work with children and their families at critical developmental times. Early identification of families wanting and needing support allows them to start building healthy relationships that will be beneficial to the whole family.

About the Regional Practice Initiatives Lead role

As a Regional Practice Initiatives Lead, you will lead, mentor, and coach an incredible team of Clinical Educators and Clinical Resource Nurses. This senior practice position collaborates with the Ministry of Health, Medical Health Officers and other stakeholders both within and external to VCH.

We are looking for someone with strong analytical and data interpretation skills and a solid Maternal Child Nursing and Public Health background of at least 5-10 years.
