Thanks from Ted and Chris

Research Decisions [1992 – 2019]

The two of us would like to thank all of those who purchased the various editions of Research Decisions and ordered the books for their classes over the years. We were always pleased to see the many different disciplines in which the book found a home.

We also would like to thank our publishers – the most recent being Thomson Nelson – for sticking with us through five editions spanning 27 years. Ted would especially like to thank the now defunct Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, who published the first edition, for taking a chance on a methods book that was like no other in 1992 when it sought to include both qualitative and quantitative methods under one cover.

This is now the end of Research Decisions as far as Canadian publishers go. Nelson transferred the copyright of the book back to us in January, 2019, and the book was listed as "out of print" and no longer for sale as of 1 January 2019.

But with every end comes a new beginning. Fans of Research Decisions will be happy to hear (we hope) that the two of us signed a contract with Sage Publications to produce a new book that will rise from the ashes of Research Decisions. We are pleased to be joining the Sage team and look forward to the international markets it will open for the book. We finished writing it in July, 2019, spent a few more months tweaking this and that, and the new book — which will be entitled Research Methods in the Social and Health Sciences — will be out in Summer, 2020. See you then!
